1 I. INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

2 Plaintiff Securities and Exchange Commission (“Commission”) seeks in this action to 3 enjoin violations of the federal securities laws and to recover – to the extent possible – tens of 4 millions of dollars stolen from trusting investors by Matthew La Madrid. Many of those 5 investors entrusted La Madrid with their lives’ savings or the equity in their homes. Many now 6 face the loss of their homes, their retirement savings, or both. The timely and effective 7 prosecution of this lawsuit and prompt, effective work by the court-appointed receiver are the 8 best hope these investors have for at least a partial recovery of their investments.

9 La Madrid asks the Court to stay this case completely and indefinitely pending the 10 completion of a potential criminal proceeding that has not actually been filed – but which he 11 suggests might be filed against him at some unspecified point in the future. See Memorandum of 12 Points and Authorities In Support Of Motion To Stay Proceedings Pending Resolution Of 13 Criminal Action (“Stay Motion”). Such a result would indefinitely postpone the resolution of 14 this matter, impair and delay the potential recovery of losses suffered by defrauded investors, 15 frustrate the Commission’s statutory mission to enforce federal securities laws, and tie the hands 16 of the court-appointed Receiver.

17 The applicable law is clear. “The Constitution does not ordinarily require a stay of civil 18 proceedings pending the outcome of criminal proceedings.” Keating v. OTS, 45 F.3d 322, 324 19 (9th Cir. 1995); accord Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Molinaro, 889 F.2d 899, 902 (9th Cir.
 20 1989). And a defendant’s argument for a stay is “far weaker” when – as is the case here – no 21 criminal charges have actually been filed. Molinaro, 889 F.2d at 903. La Madrid acknowledges 22 that Keating and Molinaro set forth the governing law. Stay Motion at 7. He mischaracterizes 23 their analyses, however, and pointedly ignores their actual holdings – both Keating and Molinaro 24 held that pending or threatened criminal proceedings did not justify a stay of overlapping 25 criminal proceedings. Keating, 45 F.3d at 326; Molinaro, 889 F.2d at 903.

26 II. STATEMENT OF FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

27 On April 28, 2008, the Commission filed its Complaint in this action, alleging that 28 defendants Matthew La Madrid and Plus Money, Inc. engaged in securities fraud in violation of

1 the Investment Advisers Act of 1940. The claims for relief against La Madrid and Plus Money
 2 arise from the Defendants' solicitation and misappropriation of more than $30 million dollars 3 from investors in purported hedge funds known as the "Premium Return Funds".

4 This Court issued a Temporary Restraining Order ("TRO") against the Defendants and 5 others on April 30, 2008. On May 16, 2008 the TRO was converted into a Preliminary 6 Injunction which, among other things, enjoined La Madrid from future violations of the federal 7 securities laws, imposed an asset freeze, appointed a Permanent Receiver over Plus Money and 8 the Premium Return Funds, and ordered La Madrid to produce a complete and detailed schedule 9 of assets within five days.

10 La Madrid has refused to provide the schedule of assets required by the Preliminary 11 Injunction. He has declined to file an Answer to the Complaint, although his time to do so has 12 run. Declaration of John M. McCoy III ("McCoy Decl."), ¶¶ 2-3.

13 La Madrid is also a plaintiff in the action styled Matthew La Madrid, et al. v. Heriberto
 14 Lopez Perales, et al., U.S.D.C. (Southern District of California) Case No. 08-CV-0823 BEN 15 (POR) (the "Perales Lawsuit"), which is pending before this Court. In the Perales Lawsuit, La 16 Madrid makes extensive factual allegations regarding events – including his handling of 17 Premium Return Fund investor funds – that are also at issue in this action.

18 III. ARGUMENT

19 A. The Supreme Court And The Ninth Circuit Have Held That A Defendant Is Not Entitled To A Stay Even When Criminal Charges Are Pending

21 The Supreme Court has held that a defendant is not entitled to a stay of civil litigation 22 merely because criminal charges are pending against him. It is well established that parallel civil 23 and criminal proceedings can be brought and pursued against the same defendant 24 "simultaneously or successively." See Standard Sanitary Mfg. v. United States, 226 U.S. 52, 25 33 S. Ct. 9, 16 (1912).

26 "In the absence of substantial prejudice to the rights of the parties involved, such parallel 27 proceedings are unobjectionable." SEC v. Dresser Industries, Inc., 628 F.2d 1368, 1374 (D.C.
 28 Cir. 1980). "The Constitution does not ordinarily require a stay of civil proceedings pending the

1 outcome of criminal proceedings.” Keating, 45 F.3d at 324, citing FSLIC v. Molinaro, 889 F.2d 2 at 902, and Dresser, supra at 1376.

3 In Keating, the Ninth Circuit rejected Charles Keating’s argument that overlapping civil 4 and criminal proceedings entitled him to a stay of the civil proceedings. In affirming an 5 administrative law judge’s refusal to stay the Office of Thrift Supervision’s civil case against 6 Keating, the Ninth Circuit ruled that “[a] defendant has no absolute right not to be forced to 7 choose between testifying in a civil matter and asserting his Fifth Amendment privilege. Not 8 only is it permissible to conduct a civil proceeding at the same time as a related criminal 9 proceeding, even if that necessitates invocation of the Fifth Amendment privilege, but it is even 10 permissible for the trier of fact to draw adverse inferences from the invocation of the Fifth 11 Amendment in a civil proceeding.” Keating, 45 F.3d at 326, citing Baxter v. Palmigiano, 425 12 U.S. 308, 318, 96 S. Ct. 1551, 1557 (1976).

13 In FSLIC v. Molinaro, the defendant argued that the FBI was investigating the same 14 activities that caused the FSLIC to file a civil action against him. The Ninth Circuit upheld the 15 district court’s denial of Molinaro’s motion to stay the civil proceeding, holding that while “a 16 district court may stay civil proceedings pending the outcome of parallel civil proceedings, such 17 action is not required by the Constitution” and the decision to stay should be made “in light of 18 the particular circumstances and competing interests involved in the case.” Molinaro, 889 F.2d 19 at 902 (citations omitted).

20 In Keating and Molinaro, the Ninth Circuit identified the factors¹ that generally should be 21 considered when a stay is requested:

22 (1) the interest of the plaintiff in proceeding with the litigation or any particular aspect of 23 it, and the potential prejudice to the plaintiff of a delay; 24 (2) the burden which any particular aspect of the proceedings may impose on defendants;

 26 ¹ La Madrid suggests that Keating and Molinaro apply a six-factor test. Stay Motion at 7. This 27 is incorrect. Both Keating and Molinaro enumerate five factors, not six. Recognizing that the 28 standard actually used by the Ninth Circuit is not favorable to him, La Madrid responds by making up (but attributing to the Ninth Circuit) his own test, one which elevates La Madrid’s preference to avoid a formal invocation of the Fifth Amendment into an independent “factor”.

(3) the convenience of the court in the management of its cases, and the efficient use of judicial resources;

(4) the interests of persons not parties to the civil litigation; and

(5) the interests of the public in the pending civil and criminal litigation.

See Molinaro, 889 F.2d at 903 (citing Golden Quality Ice Cream Co. v. Deerfield Specialty Papers, Inc., 87 F.R.D. 53, 56 (E.D. Pa. 1980); Dresser, 628 F.2d at 1376; and United States v. Kordel, 397 U.S. 1, 90 S. Ct. 763 (1970)); Keating, 45 F.3d at 325.

Where – as here – no criminal indictment is pending, “the case for staying civil proceeding is ‘a far weaker one.’” Molinaro, 889 F.2d at 903, citing Dresser, 628 F.2d at 1376. “The possibility that criminal indictments would be brought against Molinaro may have made responding to civil charges more difficult for him, but the court did not abuse its discretion by deciding that this difficulty did not outweigh the other interests involved. Under the circumstances presented to the district court when the motion was made, the court did not abuse its discretion by denying Molinaro’s motion for a stay.” Id.

B. The Factors Identified By The Ninth Circuit Establish That A Stay Is Not Appropriate In This Case

1. A Stay Would Substantially Prejudice The Commission And The Receiver

La Madrid argues weakly that delay would not be prejudicial to the Commission. Stay Motion at 12. The law and common sense both say otherwise.

The Ninth Circuit has held that the Commission has a strong and legally cognizable interest in timely pursuing civil actions to obtain judgments of permanent injunction against La Madrid and other potential defendants, obtain orders that ill-gotten gains be disgorged, and seek the imposition of civil penalties to punish wrongdoers for their violations of the federal securities laws. See Molinaro, 889 F.2d at 903; see also FTC v. J.K. Publications, Inc., 99 F. Supp. 2d 1176, 1197 (C.D. Cal. 2000) (recognizing government agencies' strong interest in avoiding delay in civil enforcement proceedings). A stay of this action would allow evidence to become stale, witnesses' memories to fade, and missing assets to be further dissipated.

Similarly, the Receiver's efforts to marshal and account for assets stolen from the investors – including the use of discovery from La Madrid to investigate his use and diversion of investor funds – should proceed apace. Indeed, La Madrid has asserted in the Perales Lawsuit that substantial investor funds were misappropriated by individuals and entities other than himself. Depriving the Receiver of the ability to utilize the discovery process and this Court’s compulsory authority to pursue those and other assets would drastically undermine the Receiver’s ability to fulfill his duties to this Court and the investors. See Opposition of Stephen J. Donell, Receiver, To Defendant Matthew La Madrid’s Motion To Stay Civil Proceedings Pending Resolution Of Criminal Action (“Receiver’s Opp.”) at 6-8.

The Commission and the Receiver each have a compelling interest in proceeding expeditiously to protect the defrauded investors, discover the full scope of wrongful conduct, identify and preserve critical evidence, locate and recover assets, and begin the complex and lengthy processing of formulating and implementing relief to mitigate the harm the defrauded investors have suffered and continue to suffer.

Moreover, while La Madrid asserts that this action and the inchoate criminal investigation cover the same subject matter, he clearly has no basis for making such a sweeping generalization. They may well overlap, as both concern La Madrid’s fraudulent activities as a purported investment advisor and investment manager. But at this point, even the Commission cannot say with certainty what scope of conduct ultimately will be encompassed by this action. The Commission and the Receiver have received numerous communications from investors suggesting that La Madrid’s fraudulent conduct was much broader than what has been alleged in the Complaint. The Commission continues to investigate these allegations and will amend its complaint if discovery reveals appropriate grounds for doing so.² McCoy Decl., ¶ 5. The Commission understands that the Receiver is also investigating these additional allegations – an ² Nor does the Commission know the precise scope of the investigation being conducted by the criminal authorities. Neither, of course, does La Madrid. The Commission notes, however, that the criminal authorities have finite resources that they can devote to this matter and may have enforcement priorities different from those of the Commission. At present, La Madrid is the only person who knows the full range of his own conduct, and his tactical effort to preserve that status quo runs directly counter to the public interest generally and the interests of those who had the misfortune to invest with La Madrid in particular.

1 investigation made more timely, costly, and difficult by La Madrid's persistent stonewalling and 2 obstructionism. These investigations would be stymied by a stay of this case – which is 3 precisely why La Madrid seeks a broad, indefinite stay.

4 2. Proceeding With This Action Will Not Impose An Undue Burden On La 5 Madrid

6 a) Because No Criminal Proceeding Is Pending, La Madrid's Request
 For A Stay Is Especially Weak

7 As previously noted, “[t]he case for staying civil proceedings is ‘a far weaker one’ when 8 ‘[n]o indictment has been returned . . .’” Molinaro, 889 F.2d at 903, citing Dresser, 628 F.2d at 9 1376. “[A] stay of a civil case is an ‘extraordinary remedy,’ and ‘stays will generally not be 10 granted before an indictment is issued.’” SEC v. Brown, No. 06-1213, 2007 WL 4191998 (D.
 11 Minn. Nov. 21, 2007) (finding no basis for stay even though defendant had received a “target 12 letter” from the U.S. Attorney’s Office). Accordingly, courts routinely decline to stay civil 13 proceedings when a related criminal matter is still in the investigatory stage. See, e.g., SEC v.
 14 Treadway, No. 04-CIV-3463 WM JCF, 2005 WL 713826, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2005); In re
 15 Worldcom, Inc. Sec. Litig., Nos. 02 Civ. 3288, 02 Civ. 4816, 2002 WL 31729501, at *4 16 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 5, 2002); SEC v. Sandifur, No. C05-1631C, 2006 WL 1719920 (W.D. Wash.
 17 June 19, 2006); SEC v. Rivelli, No. Civ.A 05-CV-1039-RPM, 2005 WL 2789317 (D. Colo. Oct.
 18 26, 2005).

19 La Madrid has not been indicted. Indeed, it appears that no indictments whatsoever – of 20 La Madrid or anyone else – have been issued in connection with the investigation La Madrid 21 references. And in the absence of an indictment, the Court has no way of knowing what conduct 22 a hypothetical future indictment might cover if it is ever issued. Nor does La Madrid offer 23 anything beyond self-serving hearsay to suggest that an indictment may be “imminent” – no 24 target letter, no plea agreement or proffer letter – which one would normally receive if “fully 25 cooperating” with an ongoing criminal investigation. See Motion to Stay at 8 and accompanying 26 Declaration of Joseph N. Casas, ¶ 7 (declaring that La Madrid is “fully cooperating” with 27 USAO’s criminal investigation). Nor has the U.S. Attorney’s Office intervened to support La 28 Madrid’s request for a stay, as might be expected if La Madrid were truly cooperating with an

1 ongoing investigation. Nor does La Madrid explain what the Court should take the term 2 “imminent” to mean in this context. If La Madrid is indicted, does he expect it to occur in a 3 month? In six months? In a year?³

4 This sort of uncertainty is exactly why the Ninth Circuit held in Molinaro that the case for 5 a stay in such circumstances is “far weaker” than when there is an actual, pending indictment to 6 define and sharpen the issues. Molinaro, 889 F.2d at 903.

7 b) La Madrid’s Own Statements And Conduct Further Undermine 8 His Request For A Stay.

9 While La Madrid asserts repeatedly that his is “fully cooperating” with the United States 10 Attorney’s Office’s pending criminal investigation, he provides no concrete facts illustrating 11 such cooperation. But “full cooperation” with the criminal investigation must include at a 12 minimum providing the criminal authorities with factual information about the events in 13 question. And if La Madrid is truly providing such “full cooperation” to the criminal authorities 14 he has waived his Fifth Amendment privilege and has no need to assert it in this proceeding – 15 except to the extent it serves his tactical interest in delay and obfuscation.⁴ In other words, La 16 Madrid has no Fifth Amendment interest in withholding in this proceeding facts that he 17 purportedly is disclosing directly to the criminal authorities. His only interest in suppressing the

20 ³ The absence of an actual indictment is especially significant when one considers that La 21 Madrid argues that this action should be stayed until the “resolution of the AUSA investigation 22 and statute of limitations.” Stay Motion at 5: 20-21. As the Complaint in this action alleges 23 conduct continuing at least through March 2007, La Madrid is apparently asking this Court to stay the case until April 2012 (assuming arguendo the applicable statute of limitations is five years).

24 ⁴ As the Court is aware, the United States Attorney’s Office will intervene in and request a stay 25 of civil litigation when it feels the continuation of that litigation will interfere with contemplated 26 or ongoing criminal proceedings – such as by compromising a cooperating witness. Even when 27 the United States Attorneys Office does intervene in Commission enforcement proceedings because there is an active criminal prosecution, courts do not automatically stay discovery. See, e.g., SEC v. Kornman, No.Civ.A. 04-CV-1803L, 2006 WL 148733 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 18, 2006); SEC v. Jones, No. 04 Civ. 4385(RWS), 2005 WL 2837462 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 28, 2005).
 Regardless, it is noteworthy that the criminal authorities with whom La Madrid claims he is “fully cooperating” do not join his request for a stay.

1 facts in this case is a pecuniary one – an interest to which no Constitutional privilege or 2 protection attaches.⁵

3 3. Judicial Economy Does Not Warrant A Stay

4 As he does elsewhere in the Motion, La Madrid ignores relevant authority and instead 5 cites inapposite cases that do not stand for the propositions La Madrid urges. In SEC v.
 6 Mutuals.com, Inc., 2004 WL 1629929 (N.D. Tex. 2004), the Court granted a motion to stay filed 7 by the U.S. Attorney's Office (and not opposed by the SEC) on the grounds that maintenance of 8 simultaneous actions would interfere with the efficient prosecution of the criminal matter. Id. at 9 *4. The criminal authorities have made no such request here.

10 Chronicle Publishing Co. v. Nat'l Broadcasting Co., 294 F.2d 744, 747-48 (9th Cir., 11 1960) is even farther afield. Indeed, the case did not involve parallel criminal and civil 12 proceedings at all – La Madrid's inaccurate characterization of the case notwithstanding. In 13 Chronicle Publishing, a private lawsuit challenged a proposed merger in the broadcast media 14 field on antitrust grounds. The court stayed the action pending the completion of an ongoing 15 Federal Communications Commission review of the proposed merger. The decision was 16 explicitly grounded in the requirements of complex antitrust litigation and the fact that – 17 regardless of the outcome of the private lawsuit – the proposed merger could not proceed without 18 FCC approval. Id. Neither the facts nor the holding of the case have any relevance here.

19 By way of contrast, relevant case law recognizes that an indefinite stay of proceedings is 20 contrary to the efficient use of judicial resources. FTC v. J.K. Publications, Inc., 99 F. Supp. 2d 21 at 1197; see also IBM Corp. v. Brown, 857 F. Supp. 1384, 1392 (C.D. Cal. 1994) (“[a] stay 22 would disrupt the court’s calendar by indefinitely postponing trial”).

23 4. A Stay Would Impose A Drastic And Inequitable Burden On Defrauded 24 Investors

25 La Madrid’s argument that a stay would be in the interest of non-parties is disingenuous 26 at best, and is flatly contradicted by all of the relevant case law. The most important non-parties

27
 28 ⁵ Moreover, La Madrid filed an affirmative civil complaint – currently pending before this Court – making affirmative factual allegations about his management of investor funds.

1 are, of course, the Premium Return Fund investors. The law recognizes and protects the interests 2 of defrauded investors in prompt recovery of restitution or disgorgement and disfavors stays that 3 delay such potential recoveries. See Molinaro, 889 F.2d at 903 (victims' interest in prompt 4 recovery weighs heavily against request for stay); J.K. Publications, 99 F. Supp. 2d at 1176 5 (same). La Madrid convinced investors to take second mortgages on their homes and invest the 6 loan proceeds with him, or to entrust him with their retirement accounts and lives' savings.
7 Many now find themselves in dire economic circumstances as a direct result of La Madrid's 8 misappropriation of their savings. Forcing them to wait in limbo while this case is stayed 9 indefinitely – in deference to La Madrid's preference for avoiding hard litigation choices – 10 would be a serious miscarriage of justice. Indeed, La Madrid's cavalier disregard for the 11 hardships to which he has subjected these investors adds insult to their substantial economic 12 injuries.

13 It bears repeating that a stay not only will delay significantly any recovery by the 14 defrauded investors, but also may substantially reduce the amount of any such recovery. To 15 date, the Commission and the Receiver have only located a portion of the misappropriated funds.
16 In his motion and supporting declaration, La Madrid suggests strongly that he may have taken 17 steps to secrete his ill-gotten gains before this action was filed. See Stay Motion at 13: 9-10 18 ("Mr. La Madrid has not attempted to secrete his assets since April 1, 2008 . . ."). To the extent 19 La Madrid has secreted assets, a stay will give La Madrid and his transferees or co-conspirators 20 the opportunity to further dissipate or secrete those assets while the Commission and the 21 Receiver are unable to use this Court's authority to pursue and recover them.⁶

22 In short, the interests of the non-party investors – the most important consideration before 23 the Court – weigh heavily against the requested stay.

26 ⁶ Of course, the risk that secreted assets may be moved beyond the reach of the Commission 27 and the Receiver is heightened by La Madrid's refusal to comply with this Court's order that he 28 provide a detailed schedule of assets. Simply put, La Madrid won't tell the Court where his assets are, and he seeks a stay to obstruct the efforts of the Commission and the Receiver to look for them.

1 5. The Public Interest Strongly Favors The Timely Prosecution Of This 2 Action And The Denial Of La Madrid's Motion For A Stay

3 The public interest does not favor a stay. The Commission brought this civil enforcement 4 action in the public interest. The Commission, which is statutorily charged with the enforcement 5 of the federal securities laws in the public interest, has a strong interest in the timely prosecution 6 and resolution of civil enforcement proceedings. A stay would run counter to the public's 7 compelling interest in the fair, efficient, effective, and swift enforcement of the federal securities 8 laws. See Keating, 45 F.3d at 325 (recognizing public interest favors timely resolution of civil 9 action and weighs against stay); Molinaro, 889 F.2d at 903 (same).

10 Indeed, in Keating – the primary case on which La Madrid relies – the Ninth Circuit held 11 that the public's interest in “a speedy resolution of the controversy” outweighed Keating's 12 asserted interest in avoiding reliance upon his Fifth Amendment rights, and that the compelling 13 public “concern for efficient administration would [be] unnecessarily impaired” by the 14 imposition of a stay. Keating, 45 F.3d at 325.

15 C. Even If A Partial Stay Were Warranted, It Would Be Improper And Unduly 16 Prejudicial To The Defrauded Investors To Stay The Entire Action.

17 La Madrid's grounds his request for a stay on his concern that he might have to invoke 18 his Fifth Amendment rights if this case is allowed to proceed.⁷ But the relief he seeks – a stay of 19 the entire action – is far broader than would be necessary to avoid putting him to that choice. La 20 Madrid's Fifth Amendment rights come into play only if he is forced to offer testimony in his 21 defense. There is no justification whatsoever for staying critical aspects of the case – such as 22 third-party discovery or motions to amend the case as necessary to add additional parties and 23 claims for relief. Nor, of course, should any stay preclude the Commission or the Receiver from 24 addressing possible violations of this Court's existing injunction. As discussed in Section B.1, 25 supra, such an overbroad stay would improperly tie the hands of the Commission and the 26

27 ⁷ As noted elsewhere, this choice might be a difficult one for La Madrid, but it is not an 28 impermissible one. “A defendant has no absolute right not to be forced to choose between 29 testifying in a civil matter and asserting his Fifth Amendment privilege.” Keating, 45 F.3d at 30 326.

1 Receiver, with potentially disastrous consequences for defrauded investors. See Receiver's Opp.
 2 at 6-8.

3 The Commission maintains that any stay would be inappropriate under the standards 4 articulated in Keating and Molinaro. But should the Court disagree, any stay should limited to 5 discovery or dispositive motions that would require testimonial evidence from La Madrid, and 6 not to discovery or other matters directed to other parties or potential new parties.

7 IV. CONCLUSION

8 The interests the Court must balance are clear. On one side of the balance rest the 9 interests of the public in general, and the investors defrauded by La Madrid in particular, in a 10 timely resolution of this case and the continuation of the Commission's and the Receiver's 11 ongoing efforts to limn the scope of misconduct and to locate and secure available assets. On the 12 other is La Madrid's tactical preference to avoid some difficult choices about how best to defend 13 this action while concerned about the possibility that he might someday face criminal charges 14 that have yet to be filed.

15 The facts of this case, as measured against the standards set forth in Keating and 16 Molinaro, weigh decisively against the requested stay. For all of the foregoing reasons, the 17 Commission respectfully urges the Court to deny La Madrid's motion in its entirety.
